This certificate confirms only that on the date of issue the centre was approved to offer the qualification type listed. The certificate has a duration of two years until the expiry date shown.

Learning and Teaching Strategies

The learning and teaching strategy for Pearson BTEC Level 5 HND Diploma in Electrical and Electronic Engineering is explicitly designed to contribute to the achievement of intended learning outcomes which are clearly expressed at programme and unit level. The programme employs a range of teaching and learning methods including:

- Lectures;
- Laboratory-Based Sessions;
- Computer Laboratory-Based Sessions;
- A 'workshop' programme;
- Project; and,
- independent study

However, due to the wide variety of units included in this programme, there may be different approaches adopted that are appropriate for particular units. At the start of each unit, tutors will provide unit contents consist of learning outcomes, assessment criteria which details unit structure, assessment and learning and teaching approaches to be adopted.

Lectures are used, particularly in the primary electrical and electronic engineering subjects, to convey substantial elements of the subject content, provide core themes and explanations of difficult concepts, and set the scene for students' independent learning. Students through lectures are encouraged to develop skills in listening and selective note taking, to appreciate how information is structured and presented. The traditional format is enhanced through the use of computer-based, or other audio-visual aids etc. together with lecture notes.

The lecture and workshop programmes are timetabled and together make up the lecturer supported study hours. Laboratory based sessions and computer laboratory based sessions constitutes directed learning. Finally, students are expected to undertake independent learning, involving, for example, students conducting their own research, further reading and references. There will be a change in the balance of supported, directed and independent learning as a unit progresses and certainly from Level 4 (Year 1) to Level 5 (Year 2). Learning and teaching strategies adopted at Level 4 reflect the fact that students have been recruited from a wide range of backgrounds and may have very different entry skill levels.

- Oral presentation;
- Planning, conducting and reporting of project work;
- Group work (if applicable)

Students on the programme are presented with an Assessment Schedule providing details of the submission deadlines for summative assessments. This is included in the programme handbook and individual module assessments are detailed in the module handbooks.

The programme aims to:

- Provide students with high quality teaching and learning experiences that are relevant to Business Management careers;
- Develop subject specific knowledge and understanding appropriate to Business Management careers, including study of organisations, their management and the changing environment in which they operate;
- Develop the capacity for critical analysis, evaluation and synthesis, through the application of knowledge to a wide range of situations;
- Encourage creativity and develop appropriate research, communication and quantitative skills;
- Prepare students for a career in business and management and progression to further study;
- Develop ability to become autonomous learners and to reflect upon personal skill development, thus encouraging life-long learning;

Intended Learning Outcomes

The programme provides opportunities for students to develop and demonstrate knowledge and understanding, skills and other attributes in the following areas. The programme outcomes have references to the benchmark statements for General Business and Management (2007).

The programme learning outcomes will be delivered via the core modules of the programme. However, optional modules such as Management Accounting, Quality Management, Small Business Enterprise and Investment offer students further opportunities to develop skills and gain knowledge and understanding. Each module specification contains six learning outcomes which mirror the format and language of the programme learning outcomes detailed below:

On completion of the programme students will be able to:

Learning Outcome	Linkages to course content
1) Demonstrate knowledge and understanding of organizations, the external environment in which they operate, how they are managed and a thorough understanding of the interdisciplinary nature of the management field;	Organizations This is generally seen as encompassing the internal aspects, functions and processes of an organization including finance, ICT, markets and customers. The following core modules include relevant knowledge content: Level 4 – Managing Financial Resources and Decisions; Marketing; Organisations & Behaviour;

sources	research, market research and solve business and management problems
3) Demonstrate cognitive skills of critical thinking, analysis and synthesis; demonstrate the ability to solve structured and unstructured marketing and business problems in unpredictable contexts; demonstrate the ability to prepare and defend a business case for a product / service	Application and analysis requirements are included as a separate learning outcome in all module specifications. Individual modules will allow students to identify and challenge assumptions, evaluate contemporary theories and models and develop and present arguments in a coherent manner
4) Communicate both orally and in writing, effectively and appropriately, using a range of formats and media relevant to a career in marketing and business and management.	Communication requirements are included as a separate learning outcome in all module specifications. Additionally, varied assessment methods, both formative and summative, will ensure that students are practiced in the production of presentations, marketing plans, academic essays, business reports, magazine articles, graphical and statistical data etc.
5) Demonstrate effective self management skills; and demonstrate the ability to learn and work autonomously and reflect through self appraisal	Contribution and reflection requirements are included as a separate learning outcome in all module specifications. In addition, all coursework submitted is accompanied by a reflective journal.
6) Demonstrate other subject specific and transferable skills including collecting and presenting market research data, team working, numeracy and quantitative skills, ICT for business applications and negotiating.	Practical skill requirements are included as a separate learning outcome in all module specifications.

Benchmarks and Reference Points

The above mentioned programme learning outcomes have been informed by 2007 QAA General Business & Management benchmarks statement. Additionally, Module learning outcomes have been influenced by professional body requirements (including ACCA, CIMA and CIPD) and CIM.

methods involving an appropriate balance between formative and summative methods.

Summative assessment is guided by the need to measure student achievement in relation to the aims and objectives specified for the programme and the specified learning outcomes of the individual units. This type of summative assessment could take the form of class test or coursework e.g. marketing plan, essays, reports, presentations, and reflective journals. Summative assessment will prepare and exempt students for progression to further study and assessment vehicles will become increasingly complex as the student progresses through the programme. For each year of study the course tutor will monitor summative assessment requirements across units in order to, where possible, smooth student workload.

Formative assessment (not formally assessed) is guided by the need to provide students with developmental feedback. This type of formative assessment encourages reflective practice, develops academic and personal skills and builds student confidence. Formative assessment is in evidence in all units throughout the programme, but is seen as particularly important in the first year.

Assessment items are designated as: practical, presentation, and coursework. The work you present for assessment is varied and could include:

- practical assessments;
- phase tests;
- data analysis ;
- case studies;
- examinations, both open and closed book;
- reflective activities where you look back over your experiences, analyse them with the assistance of relevant theory and reflective tools, and learn from the experience;
- online discussions that you have had with your peers, tutors and invited contributors to the programme;
- oral and written reports;
- journals, blogs and log books;
- plans (e.g., action plans, plans for your group activities);
- presentations;
- employer verification statements which verify that you have negotiated, agreed and conducted work-based activities;
- portfolios of evidence

Abstract

Digital Signal Processing is digital processing of digital signals i.e. applying mathematical algorithms to signals represented as sequences of numbers. There are three basic categories of signal processing: generating signals from some suitable description; modifying them, particularly by changing their frequency content (digital filtering) and analysing them (especially by investigating their frequency content using the Discrete Fourier Transform). Because of the unavoidable variation in students' mathematical background, the unit spends roughly one third of its time covering essential background, one third on the DFT and one third on digital filters.

Notes

Much of the theoretical background for this unit will be covered within it. However, detailed knowledge of calculus (differential and integral), trigonometry, complex numbers etc. is presumed throughout. Previous acquaintance with linear system theory would be beneficial.

This unit is delivered at Chindwin College, Myanmar, and is not available to University of Portsmouth campus-based students.

Requisites Statement

None

Aims (10 max.)

1	To introduce the student to key areas of discrete-time processing of signals and to the associated analytical methods.
2	To provide essential mathematical foundations for Aim 1.

Learning Outcomes (10 max.) – On successful completion of this unit, students should be able to:

1	Demonstrate knowledge of and develop algorithms for analysing discrete time signals
2	Demonstrate knowledge of and develop algorithms for modifying discrete time signals.

Abstract

Electronic systems play a key role in today's technology. The ability to design fit for purpose electronic hardware solutions is reliant on an understanding of the requirements of the underlying application, and the knowledge and practice of relevant design method. This unit provides an opportunity to explore the use of advanced electronic system both from a design and analysis viewpoints. Students will choose from a set of combinations of topics that will enable them to tackle a range of problems encountered in industry. The unit is assessed by coursework and exam.

Abstract

The unit provides students with the opportunity of working through the various phases of a 'real-life' construction project with an inter-professional team of colleagues. The unit is taught by a team of academic staff that reflects the various stages in a typical construction project in the 'real world'. Students formulate original proposals by addressing the whole range of activities involved at the conception, planning approvals, design, construction and disposal stages of a typical construction project. The intention is to integrate academic based units with the intention to improving students' comprehension of the whole of the construction process. Several well-publicised studies in recent years have identified the need for a more inter-professional and informed approach to construction projects and the overall aim of this unit is to enable future industry professionals to work more collaboratively and effectively in teams for the greater good of clients and the public. It is important that construction project teams take collective responsibility and act as self-regulated teams and this unit gives students an opportunity to explore, in practice, this approach first-hand in a safe, active student-centred learning environment.

Notes

Employability will be emphasised by replicating the practical application of the various elements of the unit from the perspective of an industry professional in civic engagement. The workplace environment is simulated by requiring students to work in small groups (4 to 6 students), who assume the role of a consultancy commissioned by a client to investigate the potential and prepare detailed briefs for a 'real-life' construction project As in the workplace, students will report directly to and have weekly (progress) meetings with an appointed Project Manager (Unit Coordinator or their designate). A Group Peer Assessment Methodology will assist the grading of student contributions to the group work. The construction briefs that result from the practice project are in the form of professional reports that can be added to students' employability portfolio. Students will be expected to comply with health and safety requirements.

A management graduate from UTS Business School (University of Technology Sydney), he returned home to Myanmar in early 2011. It was the time when Myanmar was on the verge of opening its doors as the last frontier in South East Asia, an exciting time when knowing the government and having foreign business network, anything seemed possible. After spending 3 months of graduation break by working in the family's Trading Company, he decided to stay home instead of working abroad, build on family businesses and be a part of Myanmar's socioeconomic development.

Over 8 years of his journey to being the Group CEO, Ko Kyaw Htin Latt has been involved in a various business sectors: Trading, Construction, Education and Food.

Trading: He started work as an assistant manager under a local General Manager and a Korean expat, Managing Director in a Trading Company, where he worked with various government departments, state own enterprises as well as suppliers/venders from both local and foreign markets. Trading business has given a good understanding of export, import, trade facilities and managing relationships.

Construction: He later took on project management experience as a project manager under Construction company where he was involved with various construction and development projects. He oversaw building and development of school, college campuses, hostels and telecom towers for international clients like Huawei, Ericsson and ZTE for 4 years. Construction management experience has helped him in understanding various aspects of project management, budget control, cash-flow management and sub-contractor management. Most recent projects includes project management for Gloria Jean's Coffees outlets and a 13,000 sqft Chindwin-PSB Institute campus development.

Education: initially took on responsibility as marketing director to rebrand a College and Boarding School and developed marketing strategy for both Chindwin College and Soe San Boarding School. Over the years, he took on additional roles from Business Development Director to Chief Operations Officer and eventually taking on as CEO of Chindwin College overseeing all business operations. With a vision to bring in international investors in the family business, he developed a plan to corporatize the family business by heavily involved in organizational development, setting up business

My career as an English teacher started in 1991 when I joined Government Technical Institute (currently Technological University) Mon State, as an English teacher. My teaching career spans 8 years in which I have served for universities under Ministry of Education (Myanmar) and later NGOs including the British Council where I have been contributing as a teacher trainer developing and transferring teaching methods and skills. I have done three successive projects with the British Council on education dealing with education colleges and universities where I trained teachers on approaches and methods to teaching. I have translated materials on education for the British Council, notably Connecting Classrooms Module (three textbooks) and FiT (Foundation in Teaching) modules, a total of eight modules each consisting of 6 to 8 participant books and trainer books. Apart from this theoretical exposure, I have also done handson teaching for the mentioned 28 years at university training courses and language proficiency courses.

Give a brief explanation why you believe you have the relevant experience to tutor on the above module(s)?

I started my teaching career in 1986 working for English Department, Mandalay University. I have encountered students of different learning styles and backgrounds. I had to manage those groups of students to be at their best in attitude and character. After resigning from University Lecturer, I became freelance teacher. I was offered roles with more responsibility. These positions have brought me personal and professional learning as well as the opportunity to work and train with different ages of students. According to these reasons, I believe that I have the relevant experience to tutor on these modules.

Give a brief explanation why you believe you have the relevant experience to tutor on the above module(s)?

I started my teaching career in 1986 working for English Department, Mandalay University. I have encountered students of different learning styles and backgrounds. I had to manage those groups of students to be at their best in attitude and character. After resigning from University Lecturer, I became freelance teacher. I was offered roles with more responsibility. These positions have brought me personal and professional learning as well as the opportunity to work and train with different ages of students. According to these reasons, I believe that I have the relevant experience to tutor on these modules.

Please detail your most preferred module first, as this may be taken into consideration when reviewing all tutor applications for your centre.

Give a brief explanation why you believe you have the relevant experience to tutor on the above module(s)?

I was interested in technical field since I was young because my father was a lathe owner. After passing matriculation examination, I attended the government technical institute first, and then I went to technological university. I was also trained on mechanical engineering field in the university. I have got my B.E degree in 2004, M.E degree in 2009 and Ph.D degree in 2017. I have much experienced on teaching engineering subjects especially in mechanical engineering because I worked as a teaching staff in many technological universities and colleges in Myanmar such as Mandalay Technological University, Technological University (Magway), Technological University (Mawlamyine), Technological College (Mohnyin), Technical Institute (Thantwe) and Ministry of Science and Ministry of Energy Research Department (Dattaw, Kyaukse). I teaches many subjects related to the above module to my students. So, I think I can teach the modules well.

Give a brief explanation why you believe you have the relevant experience to tutor on the above module(s)?

I am much interested in Business Strategy and Business Economic. I was once assigned to teach Business Strategy and I found that I am quite interested in that field. Then I also love Business Environment and Managerial Economic. During my MBA-time, I have found myself as I am much strong in economic and business environment. Therefore, if I am assigned to teach these two-subject, I will be very happy. As for Marketing, my previous working environments were in Sales and Marketing Sectors. So, I think I have enough practical knowledge to share with students in case I teach Marketing Subjects.

Chindwin University
Education Master Plan for 2020-2024

Background

Chindwin College was established in 2007 as a higher education business of Soe San Boarding School. Chindwin was founded with an ambition to offer an alternative pathway/a second chance to students who could not get into technical universities due to their matriculation grades. With this ambition, Chindwin began by offering Pearson BTEC HND qualifications in Engineering from Pearson UK (then EdExcel UK). The curriculum emphasizes on student centered learning with a variety of classroom activities and doing individual/group assignments. BTEC HND leads into final year of UK degree programs and 3rd year of many global universities.

Chindwin has collaborated with University of Sunderland previously for offering MBA. In 2016, Chindwin collaborated with PSB Academy Singapore to partner with University of Portsmouth UK to offer Bachelor Degree Programs in Engineering and Business Management. As of 2019, Chindwin has 4 campuses across Yangon, Mandalay and Taunggyi with a student population of approximately 1000 students.

Chindwin is currently working to be upgraded into a university status through Myanmar Investment Commission's permission in preparation of its readiness to operate as a private university under the regulatory framework of MOE.

2020-2024 Vision

Chindwin's strategic master plan for the next 5 years will be based on its development vision (2020-2024 Vision) which represents collective ambitions related to various areas of development such as development in learning and research areas, development of campus and footprint, development of collaborative partnerships and development of student bodies.

1. Flagship Private University: Chindwin aims to become a flagship university of learning in private sector by having its presence in both upper Myanmar and lower Myanmar, setting up faculties of arts, business, and technology to deliver teaching and learning opportunities including in 3 areas of learning: academic (undergraduate, postgraduate), professional development and vocational training. Chindwin will uphold to founding values of discipline, quality, student centered learning and work readiness.
2. Active footprint: Chindwin will develop 2 main university campus in Mandalay and Yangon, followed by setting up provincial colleges in every province of Myanmar to create a national learning network which can feed into its main university campuses respectively.
3. Collaborative Academic Partnerships: Chindwin will leverage on its forte on collaborating with international universities and qualification bodies to offer lifelong learning opportunities and establish research initiatives.
4. Industry Partnerships: Chindwin will continue to invest efforts in staying engaged with industry through both public and private industry collaborations. Chindwin will work both domestically and internationally to add strategic Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) to its existing list of industry partners to create internship, apprenticeship and job placement opportunities on its mission to generate "work ready, industry ready" graduates.

5. Effective Learning Management and Relevant Curriculum: Through establishment of faculties of arts, business, science and technology, and collaboration with international universities, qualification bodies and industrial partnerships, Chindwin will develop and continuously revise curriculums to be up to date, robust and relevant to work place and industries. Chindwin plans for offering new courses will anticipate and follow closely to current work/industry demands, trends and landscape.
6. Technology, Research and Innovation: Chindwin will adopt up to date technology and resources to create a modern learning environment where student centered learning supported by innovation, accessibility and integration. Chindwin will also strive to set up a research center with the support of international collaboration.
7. PPP and Public Service: Chindwin will work towards public-private-partnership (PPP) with public/government universities to explore different collaboration models (including free of charge and subsidized for low cost) in various areas of training such as certificate courses, language courses, professional development courses, teachers training, and so on.
8. Student Community Empowerment: Chindwin will continue to develop and empower its student bodies (students council, alumni association, sport association) to support its students throughout their learning journey and professional career as well as providing opportunities, supportive environment and exposure for those who excel in sports.

Collective ambitions of the master plan will be executed by a detailed implementation plan and an estimated timeline throughout year 2020 to 2025. An overview of the implementation plan and timeline can be found attached to this document.
